The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 25-28 and 31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stanton in view of Sturgis and Deck. Stanton, on pages 6,8,10 and 11, shows the claimed combination with the exception of not showing if his floor (20) is made up of flooring sections laid side-by-side, and an opening sized to accommodate both legs of his U-shaped member, and wherein the U-shaped member having legs of different length as set forth in claims 16,27 and 28. Sturgis shows a floor comprising a plurality of side-by-side flooring sections and J-bolts 37. Deck at 21 shows a slotted opening of a length to receive both legs of a U-shaped fastener. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Stanton to comprise a plurality of flooring sections laid side-by-side to facilitate handling of a flooring over a long span, as taught by Sturgis, for his U-shaped bolt to comprise legs of different lengths, as set forth in claims 27 and 29, as taught by Sturgis, to facilitate attachment to his cables, and to comprise a slotted bolt passage openings, as taught by Deck, to enable passage of his U-shaped member through his flooring.

Claims 29 and 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mohawk, Sturgis, and Deck, as applied to claim 25 above, and further in view of Hutton. Hutton shows locking plates in figs. 9 and 10. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the securing fasteners of Stanton with plates as a bearing means for bridging his apertures and locking his bolts to his floor.

Claims 15-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mohawk, Deck, and Sturgis, as applied to claim 25 above and further in view of Margartis. Margartis teaches attaching the ends of platform supporting cables by compression clamps 50 to his structure at 20 and further shows the use of screws at 72 to compress such clamps to his structure. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to attach the ends of Stanton's cables to his structure by compression clamps, as taught by Margartis, to suspend his platform from his structure.

Claim 32 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stanton, Sturgis, and Deck, as applied to claim 25 above, and further in view of Potin. Potin in fig 4 teaches the supporting an intermediate section of a cable-supported floor by a cable having one end attached to his structure and the other end attached to his cable-flooring section fastener 33. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Stanton to comprise intermediate vertical cables, as taught by Potin, attached to enhance the support of his platform.

Claims 22,23,33 and 34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stanton, Sturgis, Deck, and Margartis as applied to claim 15 above, and further in view of Hutton as applied above.

Claim 21 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stanton, Sturgis, Deck, and Margartis as applied to claim 15 above, and further in view of Potin as applied above.

Claim 24 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stanton, Sturgis, Deck, Margartis and Hutton as applied to claim 22 above, and further in view of Potin as applied above.
